Raúl Labrador and his wife Becca are the parents of five children -- Michael, Katerina, Joshua, Diego, Rafael -- and one daughter in law, With two children still at home, they are very involved in school and community events in Eagle, Idaho, where they have lived for over twenty years. After graduating from Brigham Young University, Raúl attended law school at the University of Washington before moving to Idaho to practice law and raise his family.

Raúl has represented the First Congressional District in Idaho since 2010, and is currently in his third term. Before representing Idaho in the U.S. House of Representatives, Raúl served two terms in the Idaho legislature while running his own law practice. During his time in the Idaho Legislature, Raúl became known as one of the strongest champions of conservative policies and free market principles.

Raúl's top priorities remain the same as those when he was first elected to represent Idaho in Washington, DC -- cut spending, limit government overreach, and protect individual liberty. Raúl is proud that he has kept every promise he has made to his constituents since his first election in 2010, and he will continue to fight to change the way Washington works.
