"Raúl Labrador and his wife Becca are the proud parents of five children -- Michael, Katerina, Joshua, Diego, Rafael -- and one daughter in law, Rachel. After graduating from Brigham Young University, Raúl attended law school at the University of Washington before moving to Idaho to practice law and raise his family. Having raised their children in the Eagle/Boise area over the last 20 years, they are very active in school and community events.

Prior to representing the First Congressional District of Idaho, Raúl served two terms in the Idaho Legislature while running a small business. During his time in the Idaho Legislature, Raúl became known as one of the strongest champions of conservative policies and free market principles.

Raúl's top priorities remain the same as when he was first elected to represent Idaho in Washington, DC -- balance the budget, limit government overreach, and protect individual liberty. Raúl has worked tirelessly to fulfill these promises and is honored to serve you in Washington, D.C. With your support, he will continue the fight."
